Who is considered a shuttle provider?

A shuttle provider is a person that will shuttle hikers to different locations or trail heads up and down the Appalachian Trail. They usually charge a fee.

Who is not considered a shuttle provider?

The person that picks a hiker up from a trail head close to their establishment and back in the same trail head in the morning, if the hiker stays at their establishment. This is not considered a shuttle provider.

Shuttle drivers will be removed from this list if any of the following occurs:

The ATC contacts me and lets me know of any trouble or issues.

I get reports from hikers about provider misconduct or any illegal activity.

The provider becomes known for not showing up for pick-up.

This is a listing of Appalachian Trail shuttle providers. The Trail is divided up into 11 sections, each section is roughly about 200 miles. If the shuttle provider covers one of these sections, there will be a shuttle icon under that section and all other icons that pertain to the area covered by them. However just because the icon is under that section it does not mean they cover that entire section. Please refer to the page number or mileage where they are listed in this guidebook to read their full description and see what they have listed for coverage.

Not all shuttle providers listed in this guidebook carry insurance. If we have them listed as insured, it is only because they told us they were insured. We did not verify this, we took their word for it. It is up to you to ask the shuttle provider whether or not they are insured and/or licensed to do transport or trust them and take a ride without them being insured.

This listing is for informational purposes only, and I receive no funding for posting this information.

Notes: Shuttles are not free. Talk with the provider about their costs.

Hikers should be sure of their location for a pick-up and give the driver as many details as possible, maybe even GPS coordinates.
